ABSTRACT

Spiritual Healing and the Special Needs Child

Debra J. Snyder

Spiritual healing modalities are powerful tools, which enhance holistic and allopathic methods in caring for special needs children. This research paper explores four methods of spiritual healing, which benefit disabled children on all levels of existence. The spiritual healing techniques of Touch Therapy, Sound Therapy, Channeling and Love Therapy address the unique mind-body-spirit requirements of the pediatric special needs community. Spiritual healing empowers parents and caretakers to take the responsibility of healing into their own homes and to enhance communication with their child via the Divine Spirit in ways not normally explored in traditional approaches. The scientific study of energy medicine further adds credibility to alternative models of healing and opens the minds of allopathic practitioners. Implementing a protocol of Spiritual healing for special needs children bridges the emerging scientific knowledge of energy with holistic approaches and traditional allopathic methods, unlocking the door to the expansion of Spirit Consciousness for all.

DEDICATION

Spiritual Healing and the Special Needs Child

I dedicate this dissertation to my beautiful daughter, Raegan Aria Storck, who has been my inspiration in advancing my knowledge and exploring the far reaches of the Universe. Her joyous smile and radiant spirit have been gracious companions on this amazing journey. She has taught me how to listen and speak with my heart and for that I am forever grateful. May she be a beacon to the world of how special needs children teach the lessons of Spirit, if we only listen.
